

You can read more Kate Crash at MySpace and if the world was a better place it'd bring him to me instead of leaving me always ghost hungry and questioning... everything with the mirage of his words that for a moment makes me holy and then he's gone.. vrshhh.. and i never know if he knows me or wanna hold me or why he ignores me just that sometimes i feel he owns me down to the cobwebs and crooked corners of my mind the curves of my spine and i never knew what they meant about love until i felt his hand let go of mine and here he is laughing across the room my swirling sense sliding from view and if the stones of my heart weren't in my shoes i'd walk over and whisper "i love you" but somethings are just too good to be true knowing somethings in life i'll never understand i call to someone new "r u lonely?" well come over here i'm lonely too though we're not the ones we really want for tonight we'll do to fill in the gaps that cliffed lost love led us to and when his arms swallow me i'll see you but what else can i do in the shadow of [a] love that may not come true and what else can i do but dream and dream of you and there's something about the world that rings too true and there's no one really for me to tell this to so i wrap up these dreams and let them sunset from view i love you i love you i love you